The Impact of Event Scale-Revised (IES-R) is a self-report measure which was developed to assess the frequency of reexperiencing, avoidance, and hyperarousal symptoms in post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). The aim of this study was to establish the reliability and validity of a Bosnian version of the IES-R (IES-R-BV) for use in clinical practice and research. To assess the reliability of the questionnaire, a test-retest study was performed in a sample of 44 patients with PTSD. To assess validity, a set of psychosocial variables were examined in relation to IES-R-BV scores. A time interval of at least 2 weeks was considered between the two administration of the test and the retest. The IES-R-BV showed good internal consistency (Cronbach's alpha =.83) and good test-retest reliability ($r = .65$). Factor analysis did not indicate a clear single factor representing the three subscales of the questionnaire, although exploratory factor analysis indicated the possibility of separating the factors into one representing hyperarousal, and one for reexperiencing, avoidance. Concurrent validity was established by a significant relationship between the IES-R-BV scores and depression ($r = .52$; p

Saul Loeb/AFP/Getty Images President Obama told reporters on Friday that officials at the Library of Congress had advised him to stop using the term "climate change." "I don't think we should spend our time and energy on a term when I think it's fair to say the future does not hinge on whether it's called climate change, global warming, or whatever the specific term is," Obama said. The president was responding to a question from a reporter at the beginning of a press conference at the White House. Obama has said that one of his top priorities in his final year in office is environmental sustainability. The term "climate change" is used to refer to the gradual but steady rise in the Earth's average temperature over the past century. Last November, Obama and Chinese President Xi Jinping agreed to step up efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and tackle other issues related to climate change. The deal is part of a larger, United Nations-led effort to reach global climate-change goals by 2030. In 2014, Obama said at a summit with Xi that his world view differs from that of many Americans. "What we're interested in doing is, first of all, making sure that China continues to be a responsible global citizen on climate change. I also think that, on the other side of that, the United States continues to be a responsible global citizen," Obama said. In the past I did a couple of community polls and asked you guys what you would like to see more of. I realized that I can't promise a new poll each and every week. Of course, I wanted to get the results from the community, so that they can be shown in the game. I've had a few emails asking me to continue this, because the fans were really curious to see the results. After a bit of searching for the right stats and data, I've come up with a solution that you◆
